Agency Spotlight - Family Means

Founded in 1963, the mission of FamilyMeans is to strengthen communities by strengthening families, whether defined by blood or by bond. The agency served 61 families in their first year, and now serves around 15,000 people annually. To put that number in context, the population of Stillwater is about 18,000.

FamilyMeans is dedicated to serving the needs of individuals and families who are facing challenging or changing circumstances. They do this by providing a wide range of programs for all ages. Financial Solutions (formerly Consumer Credit Counseling Services) helps people establish financial stability and to maintain it through budget counseling, debt repayment programs and other services. Counseling & Therapy services are offered at their welcoming Stillwater offices, in many schools throughout the area, and at the Center for Grief & Loss, which is a specialized mental health clinic in Saint Paul. Caregiving & Aging is a quickly growing program that provides education, respite and support for caregivers of those with a health problem, long-term illness or disability, such as dementia. FamilyMeans also offers Youth Development in the communities of Cimarron and Landfall, providing a variety of afterschool and summer activities. Finally, Employee Assistance teams with employers in Minnesota and Western Wisconsin to bring out the best in their employees by offering all of the above programs, as well as legal consultation referrals.

FamilyMeans serves all who request their help, regardless of their ability to pay. And with the wide range of services they offer, it's more than likely that you or someone you know could benefit from one of their programs at some point in their life. United Way of Washington County East has a strong, long-standing partnership with FamilyMeans to provide their valuable resources to local families and individuals. Funding from UWWCE helps to continue the programs needed to strengthen families, which in turn strengthen our community.
